INTRODUCTION

The Boyd Family Papers, 1838-1947, are centered around John Franklin Boyd (1852-1936), businessman and church official, and his wife, Amie Dove (Forman) Boyd (1856-1953), of Shelbyville, Tennessee. The Boyd Family Papers are a gift of Mrs. Elizabeth Fischer, Metairie, Louisiana and Mrs. Eleanor Corbin, New Orleans, Louisiana. The collection occupies 15.12 linear feet of shelf space, and consists of approximately 3,000 items and 1 volume. Single photocopies of unpublished writings in the Boyd Family Papers may be made for purposes of scholarly research.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Boyd Family Papers, containing approximately 3,000 items, span the period 1838-1947. The collection is composed of accounts, albums, announcements, cards, cemetery records, clippings, correspondence, estate papers, genealogical data, invitations, a journal, land records, legal documents, lists, notebooks, notices, obituaries, photographs, printed materials, programs, school records, scrapbooks, special categories, a tribute, writings, and several miscellaneous items.

Over three-fourths of the collection consists of correspondence, mainly of a family nature. These family letters, aside from personal and family matters, include a wide range of topics: early travel in automobiles ("machines"), exhibitions or World Fairs in Chicago (1893 and 1933-1934) and St. Louis (1904), the question of instrumental music in church, the Civil War in Tennessee, Confederate Decoration Day, epidemics of communicable diseases, nostrums and remedies for treating certain ailments and diseases, as rheumatism, lynching, evangelism and revival meetings, land speculation in Florida, gold fever in Colorado, night riders in Kentucky, phrenology, the presidential elections of 1896, 1912 and 1944, the Fanning Orphan School (Nashville, Tennessee), the Chautauqua, temperance, the effects of World War I on English civilians, etc. In addition to these diverse topics, prominent political figures, such as William Howard Taft, Huey Pierce Long, and Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, are discussed.

John Franklin Boyd's (1852-1936) letters to his wife, Amie Dove (Forman) Boyd (1856-1953) contain much information on the problems of operating flour mills in Kentucky and, later, Tennessee in the late 1800s and the early 1900s. His letters mention such concerns as to whether he should remain with the family mill or seek a new opportunity elsewhere, the fluctuating prices of grains, seeking an insurance settlement on a burned mill, business misunderstandings with his brother, Jesse Boyd (1862-?), etc.

Besides his milling and electric power businesses, Mr. Boyd was an active member and officer in his church in Shelbyville, Tennessee. An elder in the Church of Christ for sixty years, Boyd's letters contain frequent references to the stirring sermons preached, the revivals held, church building programs, as well as the general management of the church. As a father who took seriously his church vows, he often appealed to his children to be good Christians by attending church regularly and following the teachings of Jesus Christ.

The accounts are for the Duck River Power Co. at Shelbyville, founded by J.F. Boyd in 1912; various flour mills; The Times-Picayune Publishing Co., in New Orleans, Louisiana, managed by Yorke Poitevent Nicholson (1883-1948), the son-in-law of John Boyd; and an account book of Dr. John Lee (c. 1792-1854), listing medical services performed during 1836-1853 in the Bethalto, Illinois, area. In the back of Dr. Lee's ledger, there are additional accounting entries plus legal agreements drawn up by Samuel Forman (1807-1890), who married Dr. Lee's daughter, Elizabeth Lee (1821-1911). A plat for the Forman family cemetery near Bethalto is available. Genealogical data may be found for the Boyd, Forman, Lee and Nicholson families.

The Chambers' Edinburgh Journal, 1836-1838, is a journal of educational articles on such diverse subjects such as law, nature, the solar system, philosophy, poetry, folklore, economics, dress, etc.

Aside from the family photographs in the collection, there is an autographed picture of Albert Schweitzer (1879-1965), the famous African medical missionary; several postcard photos of Ebal Violett (1882-1957), a traveling evangelist in the early 1900s; and a faded photograph of the Victor Mills in Shelbyville, Tennessee.

The scrapbook of Mrs. Amie D. Boyd contains the usual array of clippings of personal interest, but it also includes family pictures as well as published letters received from Lieutenant Franklin Boyd (1893-1960) when he was serving with the Army in France in 1918-1919.

Among the special categories are printed materials on a "model" community at Atascadero, California. The Boyds were solicited to buy real estate in this planned community in Southern California.

There are several unpublished writings in the collection by various family members. Of particular interest is the poem "Light at Easter Time" written by Dr. Ebal Violett in memory of his wife Hazel (Bonnell) Violett (1882-1936).

The Boyd Family Papers represent an important contribution of two prominently established families in Bedford County, Tennessee, and Madison County, Illinois. In addition to its local historical value, the collection has general cultural interest by offering an insight into American life in the early part of the Twentieth Century.
