INTRODUCTION

The Tennessee Academy of Science was organized in 1912 by George H. Asley, Tennessee State Geologist. As stated in the charter, adopted at the first meeting, the Academy was created “to promote scientific research and the diffusion of knowledge concerning science; to secure communication between persons engaged in scientific work, especially in Tennessee; to assist by investigation and discussion in developing and making known the material, educational and other resources and riches of the state; to arrange and prepare for publication such reports of investigations and discussions as may further the aims and objects of the Academy, and to establish libraries, museums and laboratories when deemed feasible.”

In its 85 year history, The Tennessee Academy of Science has offered a broad range of services to the scientific community and to the state, including, the representation of scientists at the famed Scopes Trial in 1925; the publication of a well-regarded scientific quarterly, The Journal of the Tennessee Academy of Science; the Junior Academy of Science; the operation and development of the Reelfoot Lake Biological Station; and the creation of standards for the certification of pre-collegiate science teachers. Its members represent virtually every scientific agency of government, many science-based industries and most Tennessee colleges.

Over the years, the Tennessee Academy of Science has become the official voice of science in Tennessee through public stands on matters as diverse as the correct names for mountains and the teaching of evolution in public schools. The Tennessee Academy of Science Papers provide to the researcher an important link in the development of scientific thought in Tennessee and the South.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Tennessee Academy of Science Papers, comprised of four cubic feet of material, span the period 1912 through 1986. Included in the collection are academy correspondence, minutes, programs, writings and several miscellaneous items. In order to obtain easier access to the collection, three similar collections, the Charles W. Davis Papers (Acc. No. 93-039), the Dr. James J. Friauf Papers (Acc. No. 93-040) and The Tennessee Academy of Science Papers (Acc. No. 93-103), were combined into The Tennessee Academy of Science Papers.

The bulk of the collection consists of photographs. The photographs, primarily archaeological in nature, were taken by Charles W. Davis, one-time President of the Academy. They were taken to be used in his publication, American Antiquities, a copy of which is located in the collection. The photographs deal primarily with Mound Builders, and photographs of Native American artifacts.

Writings in the collection consist of articles written by Dr. James X. Corgan, Professor of Geology at Austin Peay State University. The articles trace the history and development of the various sections of the academy. Copies of The Journal of the Tennessee Academy of Science were transferred to the library collection. Also within the collection are minutes from 1912 through 1981. The minutes include such items as revisions in the constitution and by-laws, treasurer's reports, clippings, and programs, as well as minutes of the Executive Committee.

In addition, there are annual reports of the Secretary and Treasurer, 1914-1925, circular letters, announcements, programs, legislative acts, and some records concerning the Reelfoot Lake Biological Station. Although a rather small collection, to the researcher studying state-level intellectual history, especially the history of science, the Tennessee Academy of Science Papers should have some value.
