SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Record Group 191, Records of the Clerk of the Appellate Courts of Tennessee, consists of records generated by the state Supreme Court and the intermediate appellate courts from 1792-2013. The records are divided to reflect the three grand divisions of the Tennessee courts: East, Middle, and West. The collection contains a variety of materials with the majority consisting of minute books, opinion books, and enrollment books. Other records include execution dockets, order books, certiorari cases, decrees, case histories, financial records, and judgment indexes. While Record Group 191 contains a multitude of court-generated documents and official clerk records, the main case files for state Supreme Court trials are located in Record Group 170: Tennessee Supreme Court Case Files, 1792-.

Researchers should be aware that most volume numbers were assigned by TSLA staff. Original volume numbers are scarce, but those that are known are designated within parenthesis alongside the archivist's assigned volume number. Many volumes contain their own indexes and most, but not all, of the volumes of Middle and West are microfilmed. Volumes that are microfilmed are assigned a reel number. Some records are microfilmed and the original documents are not part of the collection. Most records from East Tennessee are not microfilmed and were inventoried and incorporated in 2019.

The collection contains records produced in the earliest years of the Tennessee courts. Relying on a model borrowed from North Carolina, the 1794 Territorial Assembly at Knoxville divided the prospective state into three judicial districts: Washington, Hamilton, and Mero. Within each district, the Assembly established a Superior Court of Law and Equity with original jurisdiction, or the ability to hear cases for the first time, as well as the right to hear appeals from county courts. In 1809, the Superior Court was replaced by the Supreme Court of Errors and Appeals, which heard equity cases and appeals from the newly created circuit courts. The Constitution of 1835 finally created the Supreme Court as an independent, co-equal branch of state government with exclusive appellate jurisdiction.

In 1996, the Commission on the Future of the State Judicial System (CFSJS) concluded, "Tennessee has one of the more complex and confusing court structures in the nation." The complicated nature of the Tennessee state court system is the result of Article VI of the Constitution of 1870, the same charter in effect as of 2019. Under Article VI, judicial power is vested in the Supreme Court and its inferior courts; however, the General Assembly wields the power to "ordain and establish" inferior courts. Taking advantage of this power, the General Assembly frequently utilized private acts to create courts and to make changes in the jurisdictions and locations of various existing courts.

Over the course of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, the overuse of private acts by the legislature resulted in a complex muddle of specialized courts, overlapping jurisdictions, and numerous local variations in procedures and policies. For example, in 1996, a random analysis of ten counties by the CFSJS found that court jurisdiction was different in every single county. In one county, the general sessions court had jurisdiction for misdemeanors, preliminary felonies, juvenile court, environmental court, domestic relations, probate, and mental health cases. In another county, only misdemeanor and preliminary felony cases could be heard in general sessions court. This disparity also existed at the state trial court level: in one county, the circuit court had jurisdiction for civil, mental health, domestic relations, probate, and felony cases, whereas another county's circuit court could only hear civil and mental health cases.

Despite various attempts to simplify Tennessee's judicial system, it remained esoteric and complex throughout the twentieth and into the twenty-first century. From the bottom up, Tennessee's basic court hierarchy consists of the local courts of limited jurisdiction, the trial courts of general jurisdiction, the intermediate appellate courts, and finally, the Supreme Court.

The local courts of limited jurisdiction include juvenile courts, municipal courts, and, more importantly, the general sessions courts, which were mandated in 1960 to replace the outdated justice of the peace system for every county that did not already have a general sessions court. Though their responsibilities vary, courts of general sessions typically administer preliminary hearings in major criminal cases, hold trials for minor criminal and civil cases, issue warrants, and handle small claims.

The courts of general jurisdiction are mainly comprised of the circuit and chancery courts. The circuit courts are basic trial courts with broad jurisdiction to hear civil and criminal matters, as well as appeals from local courts. The chancery courts are trial courts of equity, as opposed to courts of law, and were established to hear cases when a complete, clear remedy was not likely to be had in a court of law. Thus, chancery courts hear only civil cases, such as lawsuits, intestate estate settlements, contract disputes, injunctions, fraud, debt, foreclosures, partitioning of land, and other cases pertaining to domestic relations. The Constitution of 1870 divided the counties into twenty-five judicial districts, each with its own circuit court and chancery court. In 1984, Tennessee's ninety-five counties were redrawn into thirty-one judicial districts, a system that continues as of 2019. Over time, the General Assembly established criminal courts in thirteen of the judicial districts to help relieve overwhelmed circuit courts. Additionally, two probate courts were established in Davidson and Shelby Counties to handle the large number of estate cases within their districts.

Paralleling the expansion of the trial courts to meet the judicial needs of a growing population, similar changes transpired in the intermediate appellate courts. Until 1895, the Supreme Court heard all appeals from the lower courts, which created a backlog of cases on the court's docket. Temporary Arbitration Courts were established from 1873-1879 to help relieve the Supreme Court's caseload, and Supreme Court justices appointed Courts of Referees in 1883 to create reports to help process the logjam of cases. In 1895, in response to claims of an inefficient judiciary, the General Assembly finally established the state's first appellate court, the Court of Chancery Appeals. This tribunal heard appeals of equity cases until 1907, when it was renamed the Court of Civil Appeals and its jurisdiction expanded to include appeals from both chancery and circuit courts. In 1925, the General Assembly again restructured the appellate court when it abolished the five-member Court of Civil Appeals and established the Court of Appeals, a twelve-member panel of rotating judges that continues to this day. Lastly, in 1967 the legislature created the Court of Criminal Appeals to handle the many routine appeals of criminal cases. As of 2019, Tennessee is one of two states with a divided appellate court structure: the Court of Appeals for civil cases and the Court of Criminal Appeals for criminal cases.

The Supreme Court has the final word on questions of state law. The creation and subsequent expansion of the intermediate appellate courts enabled the Supreme Court to exert much more control over its agenda and focus on the most important questions of law. The only cases allowed to bypass the appellate courts are those dealing with state taxes, public office, and constitutional law. Death penalty cases decided in the appellate courts are automatically appealed to the Supreme Court, which also must grant review to disciplinary actions against attorneys and cases involving teacher tenure.

A legislative overhaul in 2013 created an administrative court system specifically for workers' compensation suits. The act created the Court of Workers' Compensation Claims to hear workplace injury suits, as well as the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board to hear appeals from the lower court. The Supreme Court Special Workers' Compensation Appeals Panel was formed in 1997 to adjudicate appeals in workers' compensation cases and it continues to be the arbiter in appeals from the Worker's Compensation Appeals Board. The full Supreme Court retains the ability to hear cases decided by the Special Appeals Panel.

The many and varied records of Record Group 191 reflect the work of division clerks, overseen by the Chief Clerk of the Appellate Courts, to create and maintain official records of the cases and judgments of the courts of Tennessee. Docket books are simple lists of cases heard in the courts. Execution dockets are registers of money owed for restitution, interest, and court costs. Enrollment books contain entries and transcriptions of proceedings in cases officially registered in the various courts. Similarly, minute books contain official clerk summaries of court proceedings. Opinion books hold official entries of judges' decisions and verdicts rendered in cases, while memorandum opinions are brief summaries of unanimous appellate decisions. Order books list court directions and mandates, while decrees are judgments made in courts of equity. Certiorari cases are those called up from the lower courts to the higher courts.

To reiterate, the actual case files and court documents for individual court proceedings, such as warrants, affidavits, depositions, testimony, cross-examination, and trial transcripts, may be found in Record Group 170 and its searchable database on the Tennessee State Library and Archives website: <https://sos.tn.gov/products/tsla/tennessee-supreme-court-cases>

Note: For the 2019 addition, new volume numbers were not assigned to added items. Thus, not all items will have volume numbers. For those items that already had assigned numbers, all were kept and listed in the inventory. Additionally, a few records were inventoried as "microfilmed," but their reel numbers were not listed and are unknown; for these records, the originals are located in the collection at TSLA.

TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT

Historical Sketch

The preceding scope and content and the following historical sketch of Tennessee's Supreme Court and appellate courts were compiled from: Sketches of The Bench and Bar of Tennessee by Joshua W. Caldwell (chapters III and XIII), Phases of the History of the Supreme Court of Tennessee by Samuel C. Williams (pages 75-86), Government and Politics in Tennessee by William Lyons (pages 154-164), A History of the Tennessee Supreme Court by James W. Ely Jr. (pages 5-12, 225-226), and "The Changing Court System," by Thomas R. Van Dervort in Tennessee Government and Politics: Democracy in the Volunteer State, ed. John R. Vile and Mark Byrnes. These resources are available in the Tennessee State Library and Archives. Before 1835, the Supreme Court heard both original and appellate cases; since 1835, it has only heard appellate cases.

- 1796 Tennessee's original constitution made no provision for a Supreme Court. Tennessee retained the court system of N.C., which comprised two permanent courts: 1) the Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions, equivalent to a county court with an enlarged jurisdiction; and 2) the Superior Court of Law and Equity, having both an original jurisdiction, and an appellate jurisdiction in cases coming from the Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions.
- 1809 By legislative act, the Supreme Court of Errors and Appeals was created to replace the Superior Court of Law and Equity. This court consisted of two judges, and a third judge being from one of the five circuits. This court met at: 1) Jonesboro, for the Washington District; 2) Knoxville, for the Hamilton District; 3) Nashville, for the Mero District; 4) Clarksville, for the Robertson District (consisting of Robertson, Montgomery, Dickson, and Stewart Counties) and; 5) Carthage, for the Winchester District (consisting of Jackson, Smith, and Wilson Counties). These circuits were later designated by numbers. The Robertson and Winchester Districts were carved from the Mero District in 1806. Additionally, this act created the circuit courts.
- 1811 By legislative act, the third circuit judge was removed from the Supreme Court. This same Act gave exclusive jurisdiction to the Supreme Court of all equity cases.
- 1813 The Legislature granted the circuit courts concurrent jurisdiction in equity cases.
- 1819 Appeals from circuit courts were allowed to be heard by the Supreme Court.
- 1821 The Supreme Court added a third judge to its court to compensate for its new duties of holding chancery courts.
- 1827 Two district courts of chancery were created to relieve the duties of the Supreme Court. Reynoldsburg, a town that later became lost when the county seat, stage road, and ferry crossing were moved, was named as an additional site for holding the Supreme Court.

- 1835 The adoption of the Constitution of 1835 finally created the Supreme Court as a coequal branch of state government, removing it from the arm of the General Assembly. These Constitutional changes also limited the Supreme Court to appellate jurisdiction for the first time. Knoxville, Nashville, and Jackson fixed as the seats of the Supreme Court.
- 1853 Amendment to Constitution changed tenure of judges from twelve years to eight, and also placed the election of Supreme Court Judges in the hands of all qualified voters.
- 1870 Constitutional Convention revised Supreme Court. Six judges, two from each grand division, were to comprise the Court. Any vacancy after 1873 would not be filled reducing the number to five. The number of Supreme Court Judges has remained at five to this day. (This was deemed necessary to compensate for the accumulation of business generated by the Court's suspension during the war.)
- 1873 The Arbitration Court for Middle Tennessee was created to assist in the arrears of cases.
- 1875 Another Arbitration Court was created for Middle and West Tennessee.
- 1883 The Courts of Referees were created, composed of nine members, three from each grand Division. The reports of the Referees were final. Courts expired April 1, 1886.
- 1895 The caseload of the Supreme Court continued to increase. The Court of Chancery Appeals was created as a permanent body. This court was composed of three members, one from each grand division. This court heard chancery causes assigned to it by the Supreme Court. Its decrees were final and enforceable by the Court.
- 1907 Court of Chancery Appeals renamed the Court of Civil Appeals and its jurisdiction expanded to include appeals of both chancery and civil cases.
- 1925 Court of Appeals created, a rotating panel of twelve judges to hear appeals from chancery and civil courts.
- 1960 Courts of General Sessions created to replace antiquated justice of the peace system.
- 1967 Court of Criminal Appeals created to relieve Court of Appeals of growing number of criminal appeals
- 1997 Supreme Court Special Workers' Compensation Panel formed
- 2013 Court of Workers' Compensation Claims and Workers' Compensation Appeals Board formed
